But the statute of limitations (Code, 2917) does not work discharge. The statute goes to the remedy, and does not act directly upon the right. The right remains intact. In conscience, the contract is as binding after the remedy is barred, as it was before the bar attached. Discharge is effective all over the world; but the operation of limitation acts proper, is restricted to the particular state or country for whose courts they are enacted. Though the limitation period had fully run out under circumstances that rendered it practicable to sue on the contract, that condition of things would afford no defense in another jurisdiction. The latter would administer its own limitation laws, paying no attention to those of another state or country. 11 Pick., 36; 9 How., 407; 2 Parsons on N. 13., 631; Ang. on Lim., 66, 67; 5 Ga., 231 else/1; 7 1b., 163; 5 Reporter, 398. In 47 Ga., 273, it was held that no discharge to the surety resulted from delay to sue the principal, even though an action as to the latter was barred. This is a clear recognition of the difference between bar and discharge; for if the principal debtor had been discharged, the inevitable consequence would have been the discharge of the surety likewise. Code, 2149. 2. In the present case, the principal had removed from the state, so that the bar, as to him, was prevented by section 2929 of the...
