Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Bulletin of the New York Public Library, Vol. 22: Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations, July 1918 After their day s work they repair to the library and only leave it when the lights are turned out. On Saturday afternoon and the whole day Sunday you will find them there. All professions are represented by these visitors. I know a few of them who are waiters, a number of peddlers and some men of indefinite professions. Their requirements are reduced to a minimum. They need very little. You will find them in the Russian Department, in the Reference Room, and in the Jewish Department. Most of them are devouring the latest literature and scientific works. With extreme impatience they look for the last Russian or Hebrew periodical. They swallow every new word. They seek everywhere the modern, the revolutionary, in the spiritual world. They were the first readers of the world-famous novel Jean Christophe, by the French poet and thinker, Romaine Rolland. They were the first readers of the epoch-making novel the Tunnel, by Kellerman. They sense the future. They were the first worshippers at the shrine of the Indian poet, Rabindranath Tagore. These library frequenters read for the sake of reading. They have no ulterior aim. Just as in former days Jews used to study the Talmud, simply for the sake of study. They make no practical use of their reading. I know some of them who for years and years have been cherishing the hidden thought of becoming writers. They still diligently gather material for a great epoch-making work. But years pass, and the work is not created. Some of them grow old gathering notes,...
