The book describes my experiences in the legal processes of Silicon Valley and Finland, initiated by good faith efforts to commercialize potentially transformational technologies from Russian inventors. In each of the two cases described, the Russian inventors non-compliance with obligations stipulated in signed agreements forced the initiation of arbitrations where I found myself opposed by top notch legal talent, sometimes forced into representing myself. In the Silicon Valley case, the scientist was Dr. Vladimir Poponin, his technology: the direct optical detection of DNA (promising the rapid reading of the human genome, the gateway to personalized medicine), my opponent: billionaire Vinod Khosla, who wished to remain anonymous. In Finland, the scientist was Dr. Igor Pomytkin, his technology: a treatment and prevention of Alzheimers and all age related neurological ailments, my adversary: top law firm Juridia, representing the other side, and my own lawyer! I discuss parallels between the two experiences. The first exposed hard ball legal tactics employed by Fenwick and West, in the service of a high profile Silicon Valley investor (Vinod Khosla) whose behind the scene deeds were in conflict with his carefully crafted public persona. The appendix of the book includes extensive excerpts from the transcript of the five day arbitration hearing, providing the reader an inside look at the process, and a perspective from which to judge the truthfulness of representations I make in my text. My California experience provided important lessons when I was confronted, years later, with behavior in Finland which forced me to initiate legal action against my co-founders of Buddha Biopharma Oy. In each case, procedural efforts were initiated to terminate the arbitration, in favorable court venues, without regard to the...
