Dreamschooner Press, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 129 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Walking With Moons is engaging and, at times, poignant fiction about relationships between men and women as seen through the eyes of fifty-five women. Similar to favorite songs, each story has a unique melody that lingers. Often without any background information, author Kate Deford places you in the middle of a relationship letting you listen to defining conversations or thoughts in the lives of her characters. With masterful use of double entendres, Deford writes stand-alone stories making Walking With Moons a memorable journey that readers will want to share with partners and friends. The following descriptions are about seven different comedic works from the fifty-five brief stories included in Walking With Moons: *How will their marriage survive after she reveals her Tuesdays with the bread man? *During their first dinner together, she lies to the waiter. Can her date trust anything that follows? *An elderly couple can't understand each other, but have a perfectly nice conversation anyway. *After her husband's death, a woman uses her compact mirror to reflect on life. *Shopping for his wife, he is sure he got it right at the grocery. But is his wife sure? *A married couple learns how spiders are like diamonds. *If their relationship is a game show, will they take home the Grand Prize?.
